Easter traditions in my family

By Līga Ivanova

Easter is one of my favourite festivals in a year. I have many good memories of it, starting with egg painting and having big family meals, ending with annual traditions that our family has.

It is a tradition that me, my sister and parents go to my grandparents' house to celebrate Easter. We set a table together, including easter eggs, which are an important part of our tradition. We decide which egg is the most beautiful, then we have a tournament where we test our eggs on endurance, I am often lucky enough to have the highest score of all.

Then, we have a meal together, my grandmother brings blessed food from the church. After the meal is finished, we can proceed to carry on our traditions' list.

We usually go outside if the weather is good, to sway in the swings, in order to avoid getting bitten by mosquitos. I am sure that nearly every family does that.

After we have eaten, adults usually talk about adult stuff, while we, kids, have our own party. We eat candies and other sweets, that we can find on the table, and go outside.

I like celebrating Easter because the weather is good, the sun is shining, it is warm outside, butterflies and birds are flying around, spring has come and flowers are blooming. But what's most important our relatives gather together and spend time together.
